

Guest Blog by: Liam Cyfrin and Caroline Tully

A Fig Leaf of our Imagination

There are countless quirks about humans, but one of the real doozies is that most are confused, divided and downright ditsy when it comes to their own physical nature. To millions, the human body in its natural state is embarrassing, shameful, indecent or undignified. Its exposure provokes hostility, fear, nervous laughter or mockery. It threatens social standing, challenges order, infringes laws and is often punished with a severity bizarrely incommensurate with the offence.

The really odd thing about this is that it's not generally considered odd at all. The necessity of concealing bits of the human body is taken for granted in precisely the same way that the need to provide animals with trousers isn't. And they call Pagans irrational and superstitious.

A Brief History of Nudity in Wicca, Paganism and Witchcraft

Written by Guest Blog

Thursday, 10 May 2018 18:09 -

A Brief History of Nudity in Wicca, Paganism and Witchcraft

Written by Guest Blog

Thursday, 10 May 2018 18:09 -

A Brief History of Nudity in Wicca, Paganism and Witchcraft

Written by Guest Blog

Thursday, 10 May 2018 18:09 -

naturist

A Brief History of Nudity in Wicca, Paganism and Witchcraft

Written by Guest Blog
Thursday, 10 May 2018 18:09 -

~~Wicca, Paganism, and Witchcraft: A Brief History of Nudity in Wicca, Paganism and Witchcraft~~

A Brief History of Nudity in Wicca, Paganism and Witchcraft

Written by Guest Blog

Thursday, 10 May 2018 18:09 -

Felicity's Blog https://felicityblog.com/nudity-wicca-paganism-history-part-one/